

We are going to use MTCNN because it performs both face detection and alignment, it's the most widespread method, and has plenty of implementations with proven results and active support.